

Hello,

Please consider changing the rules such that microgenerators can produce no more than double their previous electricity use. This would greatly simplify the regulations. There would be no more need to haggle over issues like whether the customer's use is going to go up if they buy an EV, and there's be no need for enforcement actions to monitor for people whose use went down after purchasing solar. It's an insignificant change that could reduce a lot of frustration and complexity.
